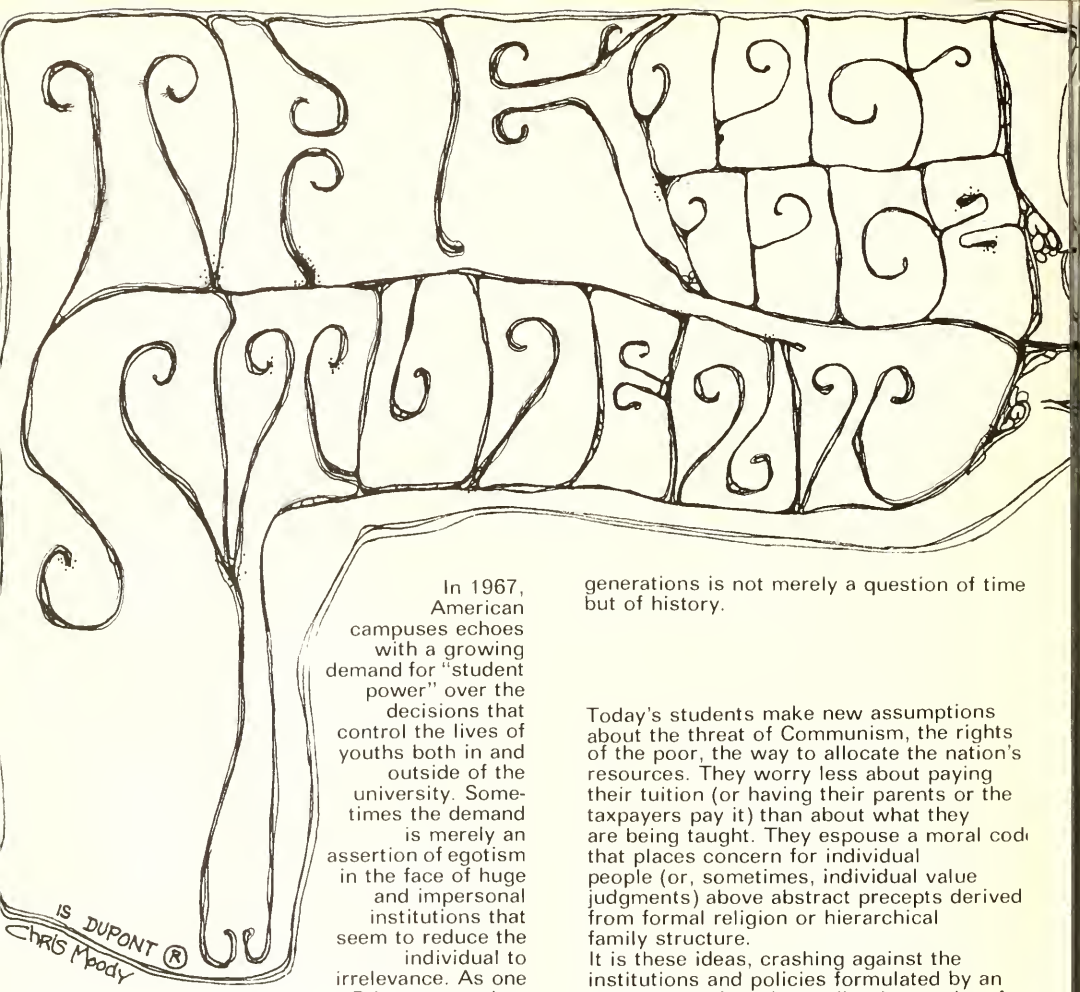
THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT GREENSBORO



In 1967, American campuses echoes with a growing demand for "student power" over the decisions that control the lives of youths both in and outside of the university. Sometimes the demand is merely an assertion of egotism in the face of huge and impersonal institutions that seem to reduce the individual to irrelevance. As one Princeton student said after the demonstration against the Vietnam war at the Pentagon in October. "We had to provoke some response. We had to get them to admit that we exist." But the demand for student power often goes deeper: it is a signal that today's college youths do not like the world that has been handed them and want to change it.

The rebellion of youth is as eternal as the seasons, but the protests of this generation have peculiar relevance for American politics and education. They are the post-World War II and almost the post-Cold War generation—the world has changed so fast since their parents were in school that the gap between the generations is not merely a question of time but of history.

Today's students make new assumptions about the threat of Communism, the rights of the poor, the way to allocate the nation's resources. They worry less about paying their tuition (or having their parents or the taxpayers pay it) than about what they are being taught. They espouse a moral code that places concern for individual people (or, sometimes, individual value judgments) above abstract precepts derived from formal religion or hierarchical family structure.

It is these ideas, crashing against the institutions and policies formulated by an older generation, that strike the sparks of student revolt. Ironically, the affluence and security provided by the older generation is a major reason why students can afford to worry about civil rights and Vietnam, and be nonchalant about their own future.

The students who care about influencing politics or their own education remain a small group on any campus; the apathetic, as always, outnumber the activists.

But change has usually been initiated not by the mass but by an active leadership that is first to perceive the gap between the professed ideals of the old order and the realities of its policies.

Early in this decade, student political interests focused on the struggle of Southern Negroes for civil rights and equal opportunity. But as the war in Vietnam has grown, and with it the draft calls, their attention has turned to foreign policy . . .

In this climate of frustration with politics, an increasing number of students appear to be concerned with their own education and campus life.

They are demanding a larger voice in deciding social and academic rules, disciplinary procedures, the hiring of professors, curriculum changes, grading systems and even the way the school is organized.

Perhaps the most revealing controvesry between students and administrations involves the regulation of social life. For many young people, formal religion or ideology hold little meaning. It is trite but true; they have grown up with the atomic bomb and so many other causes of chaos that it is very hard for them to believe that life can be tied up in neat packages. What they believe in most is each other, and the rules that stop them from loving and learning about each other are particularly onerous. Administrators who grew up in a less mobile and affluent age, who might have believed more deeply in religion and traditional morality, quickly point out the problems. The universities own the dormitories and must take the responsibility for what happens there . . . The students reply that the only way to learn to handle freedom is to have it and that it is irresponsible for the university not to allow them to live their own lives.

There is no doubt that much of the current student protest is unreasonable, arrogant and self-righteous. It is not uncommon, for example, for the faculty to initiate improvements in the educational system and for the student body to resist the changes. All wisdom does not rest with the young.

But one important theme runs through all of the protest; The students want responsibility, self-reliance, the chance to decide for themselves. What else, they ask is the aim of education?

CORADDI WRITERS' FORUM

For the first time in recent years, Coraddi offered a cash award of $25.00 in each of the following categories: Prose, Poetry and Art; for the 1968 Coraddi Writing Forum. The guest speakers of the writers' forum, including Peter Taylor and William Meredith, judged the literary work. The best art work was selected by a member of the Art Department. Award winners were announced at the critics' panel of the forum. Campus sponsor of the April 4-5 event was James Applewhite, (pictured right) of the English Department

SCORE

Toward the end of second semester a student committee to investigate complaints concerning the General Biology course was formed by sophomore, William J. Burckley. Dubbed SCORE (Student Committee Organized for Research and Evaluation) it was organized with the belief that university students and their faculty should be in closer contact. Score advocates careful evaluation of teaching performance and broadening of student study programs with expanded opportunity for independent studies. Future plans call for an annual "Outstanding Educator" award and the sponsoring of symposiums.

UNIVERSITY SYMPOSIUM

Focusing on "The Individual in the Community", the Second University Symposium, an SGA sponsored event, was held February the 28-30. Joel Fleishman, a one-time legal advisor to ex-Gov. Terry Sanford and present Assistant Provost at Yale Univ., gave the main address—"Learning to be an Individual". Panel discussions ("Being and Nothingness"), dorm group discussions and workshops were follow-ups. Symposium Committee members include: Pam Mars, Chairman, Jean Goodwin, Peggy Whalen, Judy Blankenbaker, Barb Watry, Page Buchholz, Randi Bryant, Dixie Horton, Betty Thomas, Chris Chambers, Sue Goug.

FILMS

In answer to a required mass meeting at which anti-American and anti-war films were shown, Bill Burckley, a UNC-G student and veteran of the Vietnam conflict, presented a program of commentary and slides. The program was "an effort to show both sides of the problem and was geared to give a factual understanding of what is happening in Vietnam."

The event attracted more than four hundred interested students, faculty and administrators.

Chancellor James S. Ferguson commented after attending the program "I applaude the efforts of those who attempt to present both sides of the story."

SCOTT

Friday, January the 12, Lieutenant Governor Robert Scott spoke to UNC-G students in McIver Lounge in Elliott Hall. Having announced his candidacy for governor on January 10, UNC-G was one of the first stops on his "handshaking tour" of the state. Following an introduction by YDC President, Kate Gilmore, Lieutenant Governor Scott made a short speech and then invited questions from the floor.

Questions pertained to ex-governor Terry Sanford, the speaker ban controversy, the Black Power Forum and prospective educational directives for North Carolina. James Garner and Jack Stickley, the state's two Republican candidates for governor have been invited for a later date.

BLACK POWER FORUM

For the first three days of November, representatives of the Black Power movement brought some of their leaders to campus for a series of lectures, discussions and panels. All of the speakers and panelists were people who are familiar with the concepts of the Black Power movement and with the myriad reasons which serve as its motivation. When asked for definitions of Black Power, the speakers gave varied answers which amount to the basic points: effective influence in society and personal dignity for black men as a people. Major speakers were Dr. James Brewer, professor of Afro-American History at North Carolina College in Durham, and Mr. Howard Fuller, head of Community Organization of the North Carolina Fund and lecturer at UNC-Ch School of Sociology.

STUDENT-FACULTY REVIEWING COMMITTEE

Attendance regulation, faculty cooperation with the honor policy, course evaluation and teacher evaluation were items under consideration by the Student Faculty Reviewing Committee. Conclusions were: that there should be "more faculty advisors and more stringent orientation". Members of the committee include: Mary Ellen Butler, Jane Ann Ward, Randi Bryant, Anne Hurst, Bootsie Butts, and from the faculty: Miss Marguerite Felton, Dr. Edward McCrady, Dr. Betty C. Clutts, Mr. Ernest Lee, Dr. William N. Felt.

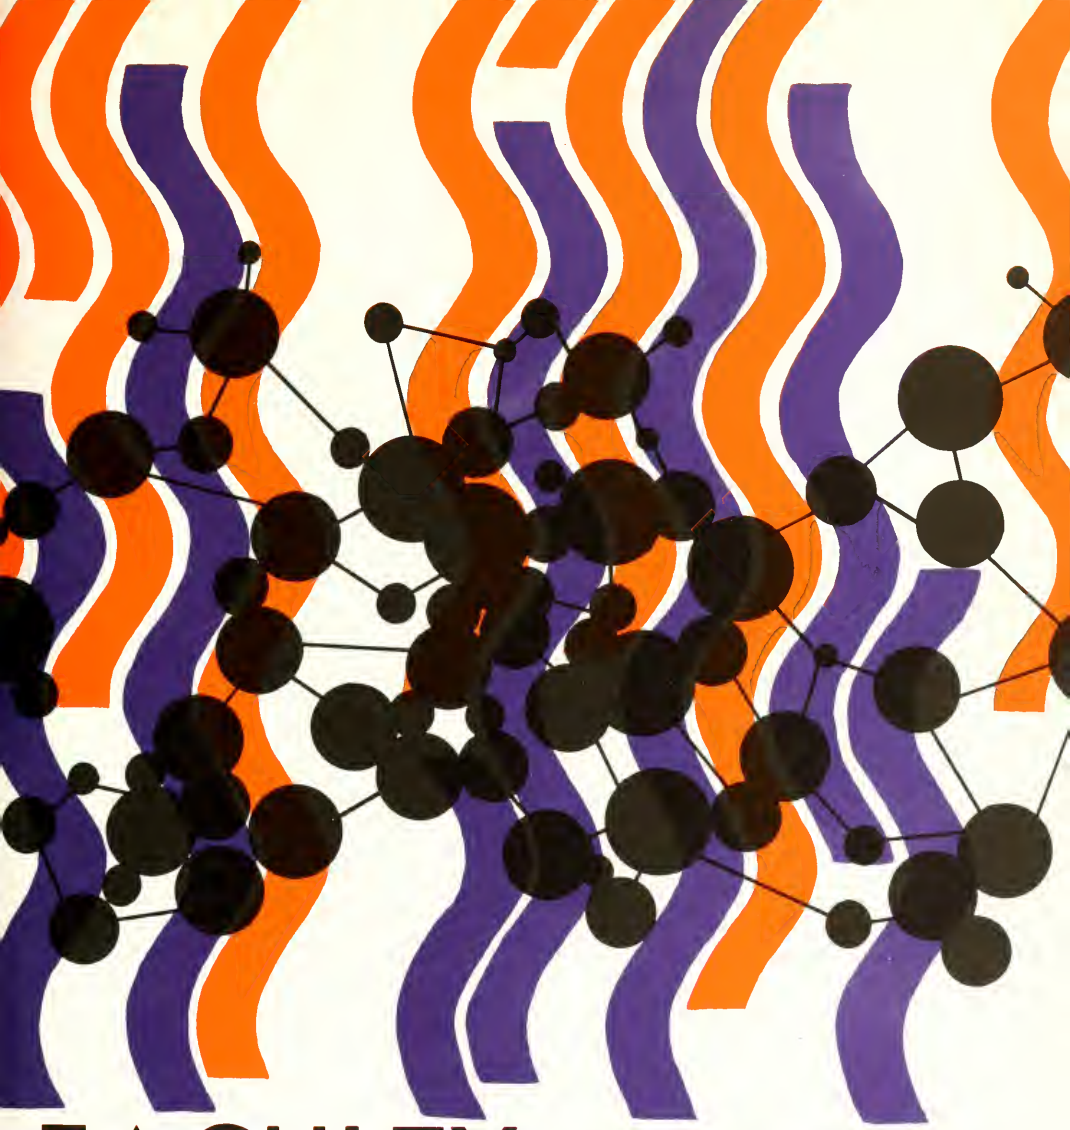
ADMINISTRATION-



FACULTY

WILLIAM C. FRIDAY
President of the Consolidated University

A casual examination of university yearbooks reflects the fact that distinctive traits and characteristics are to be found not only in persons and institutions but in college eras as well, and this is shown in the Pine Needles of 1968.

The tone and spirit of UNC-G during the year were those of a school in transition, a university engrossed in the present but busily readying itself for a demanding future by building upon and enhancing the strengths of the past. The physical signs of institutional development were all around —mounds of dirt from excavations, new buildings rising, the rerouting of driveways and streets. The curriculum, too, was being modified and expanded in order to provide a broader range of offerings for a student body steadily growing in numbers and in the diversity of their educational needs.

But the Administration would hope that the University would never allow problems of development to obscure the more fundamental responsibility of the institution, and that is to provide for each student generation and the individual members of it the educational environment that will enable them to grow in skills, insights, wisdom and understanding. Here we hope the search for truth has been conducted in an atmosphere of growing intellectual awareness, one in which the student is encouraged to develop his own powers of critical analysis and independent thought so that in the years ahead he will be equal to tasks of mastering his own life and of contributing to the welfare of society.

We hope, too, that the college year has brought to each student a widening range of friendships and loyalties that will enrich his life and add to its joys and satisfactions.

On such performance in the present can be built a most worthy future.

James S. Ferguson
Chancellor

In July of 1966 when Miss Rosemary McGee became Acting Dean of Women at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, the Physical Education Department lost a sincere and dedicated professor. Dean McGee had been in that department since she came to the University in 1954. A Texan, she attended Southwest Texas State and received an M.A. from Illinois State University and a Ph. D. from the State University of Iowa. Dr. McGee is the author of several articles for various physical education journals, & she is known on campus for her membership in Delta Kappa Gamma and the Golden Chain, where she is an honorary member.

DEANS

Perhaps too few students are familiar with the wide and varied range of people and lands Dean Mereb E. Mossman has been drawn to since her younger undergraduate years at Morningside College in Iowa. Upon graduation she travelled to the University of Chicago and Queens College in Charlotte where she received her Master's and honorary L.H D., degree, respectively. Not to be confined to the U.S. alone, however, Miss Mossman served as head of the Department of Sociology at Gingling (Woman's) College in Nanking, China. From professor of Sociology at UNC-G in 1937, she moved to Dean of Instruction, Dean of College and in 1962 to her present office, Dean of Faculty. In addition to these accomplishments, she has done much work with social educational agencies throughout North Carolina.

For any student who knows Dean Tommie Lou Smith, one word come to mind—enthusiasm. As Associate Dean she adopts a milieu of problems and helps in all facets of student life. Her experience in the Business Education and Secretarial Department at UNC-G in 1951, coupled with a vivacious personality assists her in her present position.

Clarence O. Shipton, Dean of Men, came to Woman's College in 1955 as an instructor in Science. He later became Director of Extension and then the first Dean of Men at the coeducational university. Holding an A.B. in biology and chemistry, Shipton received his master of education degree from UNC-Ch and is presently completing work for his Ph. D. Degree. A General Electric Fellow in Chemistry at Union College, a Dupont Fellow at UNC-Ch, and NSF Fellow, he has a research grant to complete his studies at NCSU.

When Elliott Hall features top artists and performers, many students tend to forget just who is responsible. This individual is Dean Katherine Taylor who spends numerous hours planning and coordinating all cultural, religious, and social activities on campus. Since receiving her bachelor of arts degree from UNC-G and her Master's at Radcliffe, she has held a variety of positions here, including counselor, professor of French, Dean of Women, and Dean of Students. Her flexible personality and talents may just as easily be detected by examing her range of duties during World War II when she served in the WAVES on the executive staff, as regimental commander, and as educational services officer.

INTER-FAITH COUNCIL

Today there is significant worldwide movement toward inter-faith understanding and unity. Using the UNC-G Interfaith Council as a focal point, members explore the possibilities for greater communication and cooperation among the denominations represented on campus. Another major area of discussion is the relevance of religion to mankind in general and to students in particular.

Members of the Inter-Faith Council assert that a complete university education should allow exposure to a wide variety of concerns of mankind, including religion. For this reason, the students' religious groups, either individually or collectively (through the IFC), offer numerous campus-wide programs, worship services, discussion groups, social gatherings, and service projects.

November Fall Festival—proceeds for mentally retarded children . . . Operation Santa—Christmas for needy families . . . Blood Mobile . . . Purse Drive—funds for World University Service . . . Milk for Bali—cancelled stamps sold to trading stamps company to buy milk and medicine for children to Bali Island . . . opportunities for students to participate as individuals in service activities.

James R. Swiggett
Basketball Coach

During the academic year 1967-68, UNC-G inaugurated a men's intercollegiate athletic program under the direction of Dr. Frank Pleasants. Five varsity teams were entered into competition in basketball, wrestling, golf, tennis and volleyball. Soccer and cross country are expected to be included among the varsity sports in the near future. Basketball, coached by James R. Swiggett, participated in a fourteen game schedule, and Coach John Douglas's wrestlers competed in seven matches. At present, UNC-G believes that its athletic needs can best be met through a non-scholarship program, and plans have been made for application to the non-scholarship Dixie Conference. Such a program enables good athletes to participate in intercollegiate play while insuring that academics remain the primary concern of the University.

In addition to varsity competition, UNC-G offers a wide variety of intramural sports coordinated by Coach Bill Russel. An annual survey taken among the students determines what activities will be included in the program throughout the year.

RECREATION ASSOCIATION

The Physical Education Department, well known throughout the nation for its excellence, is directed by Miss Ethel Martus. Under her leadership, the curriculum is planned to provide instruction in every activity of interest to the university student. As an outgrowth of this program, several extramural teams have been formed. These teams include field hockey, tennis, fencing, and basketball. The women's varsity basketball team, consisting of girls interested in participating in intercollegiate competition, plays numerous other colleges around the area. The team, coached by Miss June Galloway, completed this year's season with a 10-2 record.

Reflections . . 1967-68 Signs of the time—Some of which here compiled for you . . . A word of thanks to: Mr. George Hamer at the Development Office for permitting us to photograph the outstanding seniors and class beauties at Chinqua Penn Plantation; to Smith Studios in Raleigh (class pictures); and to Mr. Ed Goldston, our Regional Sales Representative from Hunter Publishing Company. To Peg Whalen (pages 17-20) and Jean Goodwin for their creative writing.

to all my staff and especially to Sally Meacham (typing editor), Pam Propst (organizations editor), and Sue Hourigan (photography editor and "write-in candidate for Assistant") . . . we're through'. thanks to you . . . and to Peter Julian, the father of practically every photograph within these 292 pages, (yes, he was "the humorous little man with the beard") a special thanks, . . . as to J.B. Edwards, from Hunter . . . "How soon can an MG make it to Greensboro? So what, if it's snowing!" Ideas, please.

to Georgia Vinroot, '68 Faculty-Academics Editor, and candidate for '69 Editor, take it from here
